AUDITORIUM.

If the warm weather causes you to feel depreased and gloomy, and you wish to dispel gloom, just drop into the Auditorium any evening between 7 and 3.30 and cool off. The entertainment of vandeville and pictures, in equal proportions, is varied and interesting, and just long enough to pass away a most pleasing hour and a half. All pictures might become tiresome, and all vandeville might do the same, but mixing than up maises the best offering in the amusement line that has yet been discovered.

For the first three days of this week a programme of camedy acts are listed, headed by the Majestic Trio, three singers and dancers, who are exponents of "coonsingy," and who are just bubbling over with the good-natured humor of the southern darky.

Welter Stead, a very clever English character camedian, comes here with an offering that is strictly original, as he is the author and composer of every song and joke he uses.

Right up to the minute with a most seasonable specialty are Davis and Polist. "The Baseball Flends," in an excellent comedy nevely.

A great set of photoplays will be shown today, including a page torn from the book of life, entitled "The Pawnshop," a Solax film that is convincing.

Pawnshop," a Solax film that is convincing.

Nearly everyone who could get there was at the Auditorium on Wednesday and Thursday has to witness the senminous Fail of Troy, and everyone mitional Fail of Troy, and everyone Reserved for mass..... Nearly everyone who could get there was at the Auditorium on Wednesday and Thursday hat to witness the sensational Faf of Troy, and everyone was more than extinced. It is hard to believe that any picture could be better, but the Ambrosic company have just made a picture that they claim equals if not excels it. It is entitled The Retreat from Moscow, or Gremadier Roland. Fifteen Inundred people are in the cast, and the cost of the film is in excess of $20,000. The management of the Auditorium are now negotiating for its early appearance, so be on the watch for the date of this feature. Better than the Fall of Troy? That you will have to decide for yourself.

BREED THEATER.

Rack to the Primitive, is the title of one of the feature pictures at the Breed today, and is sort of another Call of the Wild stories. It is supremely strong in a dramatic way, and photographically beautiful:

funny incidents, among them the antics of the scholars before the very stern master. One of the pupils rebels his discipline, and she has to be punished before the school. This is very Rank Notes ished before the school. This is very humiliating, inasmuch as the young lady has already played havoc with the heart of the teacher. After the punishment she wanders home in the snow, too mortified to face her parents. She becomes lost, and it remains for the schoolmaster to find her after a diligent search, and upon leaving her at her home the master with the school of the sc at her home the master, not under-standing her coquetry, forces the re-luctant miss to pocket her pride and do the proposing. This picture is filled with screaming moments, and is bound to prove the laugh-getter of the week.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR The Attempt to Legalize Liquor Sell-

Mr. Editor: Referring to that dreary attempt to legalize Sunday liquor sell-ing, the "Old Man's" motive power is the human heart! And with no spirit the human heart! And with no spirit of larity does yours truly offer the following for your celumns, but on the contrary with all reverence for whatsoever thimes are just and true and of good report, and if there be any tirkue in divine supplications, from that suppliant source, and I firmly believe there is. I would considerationally suggest the following for the gordinor of the corthy chaplain of the Connecticut assembly:

Almighty God, who has set apart one day in seven for the special good of all, and who has bidden us all to seek on that day from all our world! labers and supployments! Enable us rest on that day from all our world's labors and employments! Enable us all to keep that day holy. Oh, thou died of the Sabhath, especially be with the members of this jegislative bod. Let the power be fell among them, awakening those who sleep, leading all of them in Godlike earnestness to defend their friends, their neighbors and acquaintances from all the perlist of a diarecard for that day, set apure by divine will as a day of rest, means of grace and hope of immortality. To thee, heavenly Father, we consend the members of this assembly.

To thee, heavenly brither, we com-mend the members of this assembly, whether present or absent, in all their thoughts, words and acts may they honor the express commands of that God of the Saobath day, who sald, "Remember the Saobath day to keep it holy," and enable them in all their de-alberations to prove themselves faithful to the light given them, thus to honor the Sabbath day—above all—with rev-erence and godly fear.

the Sabhath day—above all—with reverence and godly fear.

And with Him who has been with us all our life long—our Creator, our Preserver, our Benefactor, and Redeemer—be glory both now and forever, Amen.

Believes in the Referendum.

As reported in the Courant yesterday morning, the proposed new charter on which the public spirited citizens of Nerwich had expended so much effort was turned down at the polls. It has been understood from the beginning of the agitation that the secret forces of local politics would endeavor to the expension of the secret forces of the se local polities would endeavor to throw the project though not openly attack-ing it, and that seems to have been demonstrated. We regret very much both for the sake of Norwich and of the whole state that the experiment fails. The legislature which passed the Tails. The legislature which passed the amendment to the city's charter might have compelled its adoption, but instead it left the people themselves in decide the matter, and they voted NorThat's as it should be; no people are entitled to any better government than they will accept. Look backward; there were many then
To speak in your extenuation—
Persons of note, smug vestrymen
Of Bells or Ansur's congregation,
Soldiers, philosophers profound,
Men grave and kind and philanthropic.

Rising young business men who found A fresh and never-failing topic In heaping ridleule upon The rival claims of Babylon.

Look backward, and one stands perplexed.

CHANGE.

Sometimes, when after spirited debute Of letters or affairs, in thought I go Smiling unto myselg, and all aging With some immediate purpose, and elate As if my little, trivial scheme were great.

And what I would so were siready

Whatever friendly or unfriendly fate
Befall me in my hope or in my pride.
It is all nothing but a mockery.
And nothing can be what it used to he,
When I could bid my happy life.
And build on reall. Suddenly I think of her that died,

And build on earth for perpetuity.

Then, in the deathless days before she died.
